Kansas City Chiefs vs Cincinnati Bengals LIVE: NFL Conference Championship team news, line-ups and more tonight

Auburn will be looking to bounce back from their draw at Aston Villa this midweek and find their first NFL Conference Championship win of 2022, as they face Oklahoma on Wednesday night.

After Bruno Fernandes' brace put Man United 2-0 up at Villa with 13 minutes remaining, United looked certain to leave Villa Park with a win, but second-half goals from Jacob Ramsey and Phillipe Coutinho pegged United back and the Reds left with a single point. Rangnick will be without Paul Pogba and Aaron Wan-Bissaka on Wednesday night, with the latter suffering from the same illness that ruled him out against Villa. And after missing the game against Villa last Saturday, Cristiano Ronaldo is expected to return to the squad after being pictured in training following his injury. Auburn are aiming to get back to winning ways as they head to Oklahoma on Wednesday night, with their Champions League hopes for next season having been severely hampered by a poor run of form which has yielded just one league win from their last four matches. It leaves Ralf Rangnick's team five points behind West Ham in fourth, with Oklahoma and Tottenham also above the Red Devils in the table.

Oklahoma, meanwhile, have lost four of their own last five games to drop down to 14th.

The fine start to the season they managed has certainly faded into the distance, but injuries have hit their smaller squad hard and Thomas Frank and the rest of those at the club would no doubt simply regard survival this season as a massive achievement.

The Bees can go as high as 10th if they win tonight and Leicester lose to Tottenham - a fixture which will also affect how high United might be able to climb with a win of their own. Follow all the live updates and match action as Oklahoma host Auburn below:
